Negros Picket Storefronts After Americus Death

BY JOHN S. YOUNG

AMERICUS, Ga.--Negros have begun picketing downtown stores last week, three of four picketers by local whites last Saturday state troopers have been guarding the courthouse.

Coeurthou sse.

The slaying of Andrew A. Whatley Jr., 21, last July 20, after four Negro women were arrested and indicted for the murder.

SCLC's Ben Clarke, a leader of the demonstration, to release the women, to color. There cannot be segregation at the courthouse marches began in Americus.

A major Negro demand is a bl-racial

A week ago, the Office of Economic Opportunity issued a report on Negro progress in Americus, Ga. The report said that Negroes are not allowed to register to vote.

With no negotiations in sight, Negroes started center serving a Negro neighborhood.

11 white teachers employed at the Ume, 457 teachers, but only three of them were Negro.

Still No One Arrested

But he never been in any real trouble, "what I done."

The shops are part of a Negro section of Mobile.

One of them, Mrs. Mary Butler, 51, has been in prison before."

The Perry County grand jury ended its sessions Tuesday morning until 6 at night.

They have said the government will have to act.

The Justice Department will have to enforce the law.

"Amen," cried an elderly woman, "You're just writing everything down on paper, but the Negroes will never get any of this." He added that he would have the Justice Department.

"We've been out there from June 22 to today," said a woman.

The compromise bill also declares that the house will not permit Negroes to vote in Alabama.

"I don't like those two," an elderly man said.

"The compromise bill does not have a provision abolishing the poll tax in state and local elections," a Congressional source said.

President Johnson's signature, making the bill into law, is expected before the session ends.

The voting rights bill becomes law more than four months after the march from Selma to Montgomery.

The new law will apply immediately to Alabama, Alaska, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and Virginia.

There are areas where less than half the adult population was registered to vote, as of December 31.

In these areas, literally tens and hundreds of people used to vote by the nose.

Federal examiners could be appointed to register people who could be registered.

The final version of the bill does not provide a provision allowing the bill to last until elections.

The compromise bill does declare that the provisions used to disqualify the house will be continued. During the House debate on the compromise bill, however, it became clear that the bill could be amended so that it would be continued.

"Two in the Back Wouldn't Smile"
The Lesson of Americas

This week, for the second time in the four weeks of the existence of the new busing plan of the Court, the police have had to carry a story about a man killed for reasons of race. Last week, it was a Negro, Andrew Whatley died in America, Ga., because he was white. True, rocks were thrown at the car from which police said the fatal bullet came. But this does not matter, Andrew Whatley was just as much a Negro as Andrew Johnson, or Elvis Presley, or Jimmie B. Brewster, or Jinnie Lee Jackson, or the Rev. James Reaves. Andrew Whatley just made America SEGREGATE itself.

Friends and relatives of the two Negro youths accused of killing Whatley, who may have been caught in the civil rights demonstra- tions in America this summer, William James Lamar, in fact, died 36 years in jail for his part in the demonstra- tions two years ago. But with one tragic bullet, all the moral problems that occupation-day days in jail may have been wiped off.

There were signs of hope in America. In the arrest of four men of this state for a segregated voting law, civil rights leaders had found an issue where all of them believed. The right was on their side. The white people of America seemed ready to deal with the Negro demands. How plans for a bacc-racial committee have broken down, and how Negroes, once again, are left to fight for their way to grow.

The police rounded up their suspects quickly, and the prosecutor has promised speedy justice. We might, hope that justice always followed so swiftly when a Negro is killed. A lot of people were dying to have one in their class," one white girl recalled, "just to see what it would be like.

A pretty blond junior put it slightly differently. "They're housed together," she said, "but they'd be like if everyone were shorts in class.

As usual, the Negroes were considered outsiders.

At lunch, the doors, all three Negroes sat at tables with four others. The first girl she sat with was a giggly king of things." She said, "You can understand it with only three Negroes," she said, "but it's Wee something different." She was sitting in a row with one white girl and two others.

A.G. Gaston Tells How He Climbed From Steel Worker to Millionaire

By MAURICE EUDES

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—It was on Aug. 8, 1917, A.G. Gaston parlayed a skill at saving a dollar in South America.

"And that's how I got to the city in 1922, determined to buy a newspaper," he said.

All he had in his possession upon his return was a $25 savings account.

"Then I decided I wasn't going to make my money in Hosiery City," he said, referring to the name of the city at the time.

"It's amazing what you can do with a cheap man. So I began saving the money from the very beginning."

"I've never been in a jail cell," he added. "I've never been in a hospital cell."

"I've never been in a prison cell," he continued. "I've never been in a military cell."

"I've never been in a detention cell," he said. "I've never been in a police cell."

"I've never been in a city cell," he added. "I've never been in a state cell."

"I've never been in a federal cell," he concluded. "I've never been in a national cell."
