PEACE MARCH and RALLY in ATLAN T A

These were some of the signs carried by peace marchers in last weekend's Hiroshima Day commemoration, sponsored by the Atlanta Alliance for Peace and other groups. The Japanese city of Hiroshima was struck by an American atom bomb 22 years ago.

"I marched for peace in Selma, I marched for peace in Mississippi, and I'm marching for peace today," said Mrs. Josephine L. Washburn.

"There's no difference in freedom and in peace." SCLC's Hosea Williams told the 650 people at a Saturday night rally.

Talking about the peace movement, featured speaker Dick Gregory told the marchers, "If you ain't with It, you ought not to be In It."

The first meeting between Negro and white leaders was held in 1964. Mrs. Weston said she was arrested that day. And neither Mrs. Weston nor Wallace Bailey “will ever go to jail, to witness things he’s seen.” But Mrs. Weston did not mean jail, to go to jail, when she spoke of it. She said she meant jail in the sense of "having to go through a lot of stuff, and some stuff you can’t do."

The meeting was the first time Mrs. Weston had ever seen a Negro in a white store. She said she had never seen a Negro in a white store before. Mrs. Weston said she was there because she was "going to see what happened." Mrs. Weston also said she was there to witness things she’s seen. Mrs. Weston has been in jail several times, she said. She said she had never been in jail before. Mrs. Weston also said she had never been in jail before.

"I'm a little fish, but when my school board, and the hospital where I was educated, and you know, you had better take care of things, Mr. Bailey," said Mrs. Weston. "I'm going to be there, and a lot of people will be there, and they'll come to see what happened."

Mrs. Weston also spoke of the Negroes who had been arrested. She said she had never seen a Negro in a white store before. Mrs. Weston said she had never been in jail before. She also said she had never been in jail before.

Mississippi Vote

Wednesday morning. When asked how they felt about the election, many of the voters who had come to vote for the first time said they were happy. They had not been used for the first time. They didn’t learn how to vote outside the city limits and they hoped they would not be misled. They didn’t learn how to vote outside the city limits, however, because all of them didn’t come to the polls at once.

'It's A Gold Mine'

BY KERRY GREGSON

THURSDAY, AUG. 12 - "It was a gold mine for the right people," saidometown, Alabamian representative for Federal Reserve Bank of New York, speaking at the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce meeting last week, "but it was a mine of trouble for the wrong people." The man he was referring to was Horace Haygood, a 22-year-old employee at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Tuskegee, and it was Haygood because the first Negro to work in a professional capacity in Alabama.

Tuskegee was the largest hospital in the state, with most of its work being done by white personnel. Haygood had been working there for about six months, and the word had just gotten around that he had been offered a job in another hospital.

It is a story that has happened many times in recent years, and it is a story that will happen again. Haygood's case is only one of many, and it is one that needs to be told.

But Haygood has one more letter left to write, and one more story to tell. He has one more story to be told, and one more letter to write. The end of the letter is near, but the story is not.

Says Abbeville Chief

BY MARY ELLE ELLIS

ABBEVILLE, Ala.—It’s over and out for Abbeville, Ala., with the police chief’s words having rung through the city. Fire Chief J. T. Miller refers to it as "a bad, bad, bad—let’s get on with the show." For several weeks, the city has been on edge, with rumors of a possible firestorm spreading like wildfire. Miller said that when the fire finally broke loose, it was a sight to behold.

"It’s been done every day in Abbeville," Miller said. "They say there were no lives lost, but I say we lost everything."

The men who picked up bags of free food this week, as Lee County began distributing the federal government’s surplus beef, were among the first to stream into the warehouse, explained the delay. "The flour and meal were in another warehouse," he said. "That’s why we were delayed." The men were later found to be hungry, and the word spread quickly.

AMERICAN CIVIL RIGHTS MOVEMENT

A movement for the rights of the church and the state, the American Civil Rights Movement was a key part of the civil rights movement in the United States. It was characterized by nonviolent direct action and civil disobedience, and it sought to end discrimination against African Americans. The movement began in the 1950s and gained momentum in the 1960s, culminating in the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965. The movement was led by figures such as Martin Luther King Jr., Malcolm X, and Rosa Parks. The movement’s successes included the desegregation of public schools, the end of voter discrimination, and the recognition of the rights of African Americans to vote. The movement’s legacy continues to be felt today, as it continues to fight against discrimination and inequality.
Negros Demonstrate After Holmes Incident

BY ROBERT FAYES
LEXINGTON, Miss. — Temperatures have been rising high in Holmes County during a week of demonstration and tiring struggle for justice.

It started when a 29-year-old worker said he was beaten and then shot at by policemen who "constant practice brutality." He said he told them the local police were using "brutality." A while later a police car arrived, and the worker said he told them the local police were using "brutality." He said he told them the local police were using "brutality."

He recalled this week.
