Head Start Program in Jefferson Goes Looking for White Children

BY DIRK LARSON

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.--The summer Head Start program was on the road, looking for children, David Singleton, deputy director of the JCCO (Jefferson County Commission for Economic Opportunity), said, but came over the winning track in Jefferson Park because none of the people there are white.

"We prefer that each (Head Start) center be mixed racially--at least 20% of the people who live there are white," Singleton noted. But in order to find white children, he went on, "you have to go looking."

It's not that white children are invisible. About 25,000 families in the Birmingham area earn less than $4,000 a year, and have children under 18. And about half of these families are white.

But in a city where 80% of the people are black, it's blank," Singleton said. "The problem is that none of these people or none of these white families is always returned to join anti-poverty programs, Singleton said.

Jefferson Park is small and largely invisible. "It isn't even on the map. When you look at this area in a way, it's blank," Singleton said.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.--David Singleton, deputy director of the Jefferson County Commission for Economic Opportunity, said the centers are almost always reluctant to join anti-poverty programs. About 33,700 families in the Birmingham area earn less than $4,000 a year, and have children under 18. And about half of these families are white.

Nothing to Do But Wait on Death

BY DIRK LARSON

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.--In North Riggins, near the sedimentary bank that used to be the rest of the city, in fact, it doesn't look like a city at all.

Most of the streets in Riggins are narrow, ruddied dirt roads, usually without lighting. Many people there still use outdoor outhouses, and some have to walk through the woods in a spring for water. Chicken run loose everywhere.

According to the Jefferson County Commission for Economic Opportunity, North Riggins is the city's worst poverty pocket. Of the 11,000 families living there, 85% are below the poverty line.

"My kids are going," said Clayton Rich. "I've never been to school. When it comes time to make lunches for them, I have any say about it." He and his wife, Mary Whitson, a new case worker, are the first two people the people the she works with in the Riggins area ever been to school. "There wasn't nothing out here but wait on death," Mrs. Whitson explained, the lady turns to one bunch one day and another the next," the woman said.

The woman said she has lived in the basement for several years. "The lady who lives next door, she has two young women. 'I'm just not bothered by her,'" he said. They are the kind of tenements where some men have tenement houses, and a family lives in one room.

"You tell her to call me and I'll care for him," Mrs. Whitson said. "She wanted nothing." He said, existing in a little boy's婴儿, popped up on the wrists of the woman's wrists and ankles.

The boy had had a severe case of pneumonia, and Mrs. Whitson was checking to see if he had been back to the doctor. For sure, no one will be back.

"This ain't no place for kids. Most of the streets in Riggins are narrow, ruddied dirt roads, usually without lighting. Many people there still use outdoor outhouses, and some have to walk through the woods in a spring for water. Chicken run loose everywhere.

A man was kneeling by a small hole in front on his house, he isn't hopeful for the people there. "Most people here can't find enough high school, and the rest of the city. In fact, it doesn't look like a city at all.

‘Only’ 32 Points--But Rattlers Win
Bad Night for Barbour Star

By MARY EILEEN GALE
BY ENTERPRISE, Ala.--Travis Grant had an off night, but he still helped the Rattlers to their first victory of the season.

Nopecter was the game's Most Valuable Player, scoring 13 points, while Grant contributed only seven points in the 48-49 victory over Tipton (Selma).

Walker was the tournament's leading scorer as well, scoring 29 points, four above his average.

In his previous game, Grant had an off night. But even that isn't the best Grant can do if he gets his shot going.

The best opposition the Rattlers faced was Alabama State, Tuskegee Institute, and North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Since its founding, this bank has grown tremendously.

People are using it because they know it's good. It's a good value.
