Holly Springs Students Walk Out

BY JOHN STIVERS

HOLLY SPRINGS, Miss. - If you want to know how hard they have to study in our schools, you've only to look at them. The students at Holly Springs High School are trying to walk out of their classroom today to protest against the conditions at their school.

"The truth is we don't know if we have to stay or go," said one student. "We need some answers and we need them now." The students have been demonstrating for several weeks now, and today they plan to take action.

The protest is being led by students who are tired of the poor quality of education they receive. "We're sick and tired of being treated like second-class citizens," said one student. "We want better schools and we want them now." The students are demanding better facilities, better teachers, and better curriculum.

As the protest continues, the students will be joined by community members who support their cause. "We're here to show our support," said one community member. "We're tired of seeing our children suffer in schools that are not fit for them." The community is determined to fight for better schools and a better future for their children.

The situation at Holly Springs High School is not unique. Schools all over the country are facing similar challenges. It's time for action and it's time for change.

Protest Teacher Firings, School Conditions

We all know how hard it is for teachers to educate our children. But at Holly Springs High School, the teachers are being fired without any explanation.

"We're tired of being treated like this," said one teacher. "We're here to do our job and we're not being treated like professionals." The teachers are demanding due process and fair treatment.

The school administration has been accused of mismanagement and corruption. "We need to get rid of the administration and start over," said one community member.

The situation at Holly Springs High School is not unique. Schools all over the country are facing similar challenges. It's time for action and it's time for change.

On Our City's First "Town Meeting"

Holly Springs, Miss. - The city's first "town meeting" was held last night, and the residents did not hold back.

"We need better schools," said one resident. "We need better conditions." The residents were demanding better schools and better conditions for their children.

The city administration was present, and they did listen. "We will do everything we can to meet your demands," said one administrator. "We will work hard to improve the situation.

As for the residents, they were hopeful. "We will continue to fight for our children," said one resident. "We will not give up.

The situation at Holly Springs High School is not unique. Schools all over the country are facing similar challenges. It's time for action and it's time for change.
Stamp Plan: Success or Not?

Governor Brewer Says He Still Backs Wallace

By MICHAEL J. LOTTMAN

Some people in the state legislature have laughed at the idea that the Wallace campaign is a joke. But Governor George C. Wallace has started to talk about his chances of winning the presidency on his own ticket. He has been quoted as saying that he is not renouncing Wallace. Wallace's cabinet members—notably the Swann officials on Wallace's personal safety—have refused to go along with his plans.

Dispute Over Moon Recreation Plan

By VIRGIL G. RAYES

There has been a lot of discussion about the proposal to create a new recreation area in the county. The proposal would involve the construction of a new road and the creation of a new recreation area. The proposal has been opposed by some residents who say that it would destroy their view of the mountains. The proposal has also been supported by some residents who say that it would create new jobs and new recreation opportunities.

Opinions Differ in Russell County

By DARYL E. GALE

The Russell County Chamber of Commerce has been holding public forums to discuss the proposal to create a new recreation area in the county. The forums have been attended by a large number of people, and there has been a lot of discussion about the proposal. Some people have expressed support for the proposal, while others have expressed opposition. The proposal has been discussed in the county council meetings, and there has been a lot of debate about the proposal. The proposal has also been discussed in the local newspapers, and there has been a lot of discussion about the proposal.

‘Something Is Wrong’

By MARY ELLEN GALE

The Russell County Chamber of Commerce and the Russell County Economic Development Association have been holding public forums to discuss the proposal to create a new recreation area in the county. The forums have been attended by a large number of people, and there has been a lot of discussion about the proposal. Some people have expressed support for the proposal, while others have expressed opposition. The proposal has been discussed in the county council meetings, and there has been a lot of debate about the proposal. The proposal has also been discussed in the local newspapers, and there has been a lot of discussion about the proposal.

The Russell County Chamber of Commerce has been holding public forums to discuss the proposal to create a new recreation area in the county. The forums have been attended by a large number of people, and there has been a lot of discussion about the proposal. Some people have expressed support for the proposal, while others have expressed opposition. The proposal has been discussed in the county council meetings, and there has been a lot of debate about the proposal. The proposal has also been discussed in the local newspapers, and there has been a lot of discussion about the proposal.
WASHINGTON, D. C.—A confrontation is a two-way street. In Washington, the nation's poor and the nation's "mainstream" are meeting each other—in Resurrection City, the Capitol, and elsewhere. Hopefully, both sides are learning something.

When the shanty-towns by the Washington Monument are completed, it will house about 3,000 participants in the Poor People's Campaign.

Photos by Jim Peppler
Southern Campaigners Tell

Why They Joined the Caravan

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The Southern branch of the Poor People's Campaign arrived in Washington this week, with almost 450 marchers from nine Southern states.

The group knew many hardships during the two-week journey. But there were good times as well. Some people seemed to welcome the Rain soaked marchers in Charlotte, N. C., while onlookers stayed in doorways. Sometimes the march leaders had to place baggage on the door. Nevertheless, a few travelers left home in crutches because their legs were crippled.

Why They Joined the Caravan

Robert Henson—a young man from Birmingham, Ala., who walked on crutches because his legs were crippled—led the Marchers three to five miles into every city between Birmingham and Washington. He told the marchers why he was marching too. "I lived in a concentration camp for most of my young life. My mother and I lived there because the city was too dangerous."

But there were other reasons. One young preacher from Mississippi said, "I live in a concentration camp for old people."

Some people seemed to welcome the marchers in Richmond, Va., just a few hours from Washington. "We suffered so long, nobody remembers," he said. "We're tired of being drenched by Bull Con­hoses in Birmingham and Charlotte."

He said the earlier marches included non-violent demonstrations, to get a check for her family of five. "We don't know if we can live on $6 a week."

Some people saw the hardships that were ahead, and didn't even join the group. Mrs. O. L., of Greensville, Va., decided not to go to Washington on her own. "But if you have a gun, you can't kill me," she said. "I don't like violence."

In 1962, Mrs. Greene joined SCLC. "I joined the caravan in Atlanta. But I'm not a civil rights demonstrator, unless told enthusiastically! I don't like it."

But by the time he reached North Carolina, he was wonder­ing if it could still get out of the Red. He was a hitchhiker from Washington. "I took a truck to Georgia."

Nuns welcomed Poor People's Campaign to Savannah, Ga. Now, she said, she wants to live on her own.

Text and Photos by Bob Labaree

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The Southern branch of the Poor People's Campaign arrived in Washington this week, with almost 450 marchers from nine Southern states.

The group knew many hardships during the two-week journey. But there were good times as well. Some people seemed to welcome the Rain soaked marchers in Charlotte, N. C., while onlookers stayed in doorways. Sometimes the march leaders had to place baggage on the door. Nevertheless, a few travelers left home in crutches because their legs were crippled.

Why They Joined the Caravan

Robert Henson—a young man from Birmingham, Ala., who walked on crutches because his legs were crippled—led the Marchers three to five miles into every city between Birmingham and Washington. He told the marchers why he was marching too. "I lived in a concentration camp for most of my young life. My mother and I lived there because the city was too dangerous."

But there were other reasons. One young preacher from Mississippi said, "I live in a concentration camp for old people."

Some people seemed to welcome the marchers in Richmond, Va., just a few hours from Washington. "We suffered so long, nobody remembers," he said. "We're tired of being drenched by Bull Con­hoses in Birmingham and Charlotte."

He said the earlier marches included non-violent demonstrations, to get a check for her family of five. "We don't know if we can live on $6 a week."

Some people saw the hardships that were ahead, and didn't even join the group. Mrs. O. L., of Greensville, Va., decided not to go to Washington on her own. "But if you have a gun, you can't kill me," she said. "I don't like violence."

In 1962, Mrs. Greene joined SCLC. "I joined the caravan in Atlanta. But I'm not a civil rights demonstrator, unless told enthusiastically! I don't like it."

But by the time he reached North Carolina, he was wonder­ing if it could still get out of the Red. He was a hitchhiker from Washington. "I took a truck to Georgia."

Nuns welcomed Poor People's Campaign to Savannah, Ga. Now, she said, she wants to live on her own.

Text and Photos by Bob Labaree

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The Southern branch of the Poor People's Campaign arrived in Washington this week, with almost 450 marchers from nine Southern states.

The group knew many hardships during the two-week journey. But there were good times as well. Some people seemed to welcome the Rain soaked marchers in Charlotte, N. C., while onlookers stayed in doorways. Sometimes the march leaders had to place baggage on the door. Nevertheless, a few travelers left home in crutches because their legs were crippled.

Why They Joined the Caravan

Robert Henson—a young man from Birmingham, Ala., who walked on crutches because his legs were crippled—led the Marchers three to five miles into every city between Birmingham and Washington. He told the marchers why he was marching too. "I lived in a concentration camp for most of my young life. My mother and I lived there because the city was too dangerous."

But there were other reasons. One young preacher from Mississippi said, "I live in a concentration camp for old people."

Some people seemed to welcome the marchers in Richmond, Va., just a few hours from Washington. "We suffered so long, nobody remembers," he said. "We're tired of being drenched by Bull Con­hoses in Birmingham and Charlotte."

He said the earlier marches included non-violent demonstrations, to get a check for her family of five. "We don't know if we can live on $6 a week."

Some people saw the hardships that were ahead, and didn't even join the group. Mrs. O. L., of Greensville, Va., decided not to go to Washington on her own. "But if you have a gun, you can't kill me," she said. "I don't like violence."

In 1962, Mrs. Greene joined SCLC. "I joined the caravan in Atlanta. But I'm not a civil rights demonstrator, unless told enthusiastically! I don't like it."

But by the time he reached North Carolina, he was wonder­ing if it could still get out of the Red. He was a hitchhiker from Washington. "I took a truck to Georgia."

Nuns welcomed Poor People's Campaign to Savannah, Ga. Now, she said, she wants to live on her own.

Text and Photos by Bob Labaree

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The Southern branch of the Poor People's Campaign arrived in Washington this week, with almost 450 marchers from nine Southern states. The group knew many hardships during the two-week journey. But there were good times as well. Some people seemed to welcome the Rain soaked marchers in Charlotte, N. C., while onlookers stayed in doorways. Sometimes the march leaders had to place baggage on the door. Nevertheless, a few travelers left home in crutches because their legs were crippled.

Why They Joined the Caravan

Robert Henson—a young man from Birmingham, Ala., who walked on crutches because his legs were crippled—led the Marchers three to five miles into every city between Birmingham and Washington. He told the marchers why he was marching too. "I lived in a concentration camp for most of my young life. My mother and I lived there because the city was too dangerous."

But there were other reasons. One young preacher from Mississippi said, "I live in a concentration camp for old people."

Some people seemed to welcome the marchers in Richmond, Va., just a few hours from Washington. "We suffered so long, nobody remembers," he said. "We're tired of being drenched by Bull Con­hoses in Birmingham and Charlotte."

He said the earlier marches included non-violent demonstrations, to get a check for her family of five. "We don't know if we can live on $6 a week."

Some people saw the hardships that were ahead, and didn't even join the group. Mrs. O. L., of Greensville, Va., decided not to go to Washington on her own. "But if you have a gun, you can't kill me," she said. "I don't like violence."

In 1962, Mrs. Greene joined SCLC. "I joined the caravan in Atlanta. But I'm not a civil rights demonstrator, unless told enthusiastically! I don't like it."

But by the time he reached North Carolina, he was wonder­ing if it could still get out of the Red. He was a hitchhiker from Washington. "I took a truck to Georgia."

Nuns welcomed Poor People's Campaign to Savannah, Ga. Now, she said, she wants to live on her own.
In Old Kingston Community

‘Road Back to Glory’

By Frank H. Sadler

The freedom of people in Old Kingston voted for the road program, he said. Ninety-four-year-old John Motley, the superintendent of Old Kingston during the Democratic primaries six years ago, expressed his pride in the community’s newly acquired voting rights. There is even a separate town, Old Kingston, during the Democratic primaries. Residents call it the ‘Road Back to Glory.’

TAILORED TO YOUR NEEDS

TRACIWORK ON NEW ROAD

10 AM

THE FREEDOM QUILLING BEE

The Freedom Quilting Bee is a handcrafted cooperative composed of record people working together or better their lives. The quilts they make are given to orphaned, war orphans, and the group raises money for all its products, which specifies.

“Have On” Design P.O. Box 27, Montgomery, Ala.
150.00

Blue Quilt (88” x 112”)

250.00

“Just Married” Design P.O. Box 27, Montgomery, Ala.
150.00

Double Bed Quilt (59” x 79”)

200.00

For orders or further information, please write:

FREEDOM QUILLING BEE

1012 Frank Lewis Drive

Montgomery, Ala.

264-6449

Antoni Poets Program

ADULT EDUCATION CLASSES

SUMMER SESSIONS

You’re The Southern Courier for developing, restorative reading material.

It’s better than “Just Married” and “Have On” designs!

300.00

It’s better than “Just Married” and “Have On” designs!

300.00

It’s better than “Just Married” and “Have On” designs!

300.00

For further information, please write:

The Southern Courier

P.O. Drawer 92

Greensboro, Ala.

269-4670

Radio Station WAPX

NAB INSTITUTED

THE PASTOR’S STUDY

BROADCAST DAILY

MAY 25-26, 1968

PAGE FIVE

Daniel James, a member of the Old Kingston Exchange Club, said the new road program was a reality. Residents call it the ‘Road Back to Glory.’

Another Fire

Nearby, residents of Old Kingston watched as the last of the flames was extinguished. Tucker, the neighbor, was the first to throw a wet blanket on the burning church. He later said, “I don’t know how much credit I’ll get for the fire, but I’ll be happy just to see the church saved.”

Another Fire

In Old Kingston, a church was destroyed by fire. Tucker, a neighbor, was the first to arrive at the scene. He said, “I don’t know how much credit I’ll get for the fire, but I’ll be happy just to see the church saved.”

Who has been working for Tucker more than six years ago, one neighbor expressed his pride in the community. There is even a separate town, Old Kingston. Tucker, who never would have been a neighbor, was the first to arrive at the scene. He said, “I don’t know how much credit I’ll get for the fire, but I’ll be happy just to see the church saved.”

Another Fire

In Old Kingston, a church was destroyed by fire. Tucker, a neighbor, was the first to arrive at the scene. He said, “I don’t know how much credit I’ll get for the fire, but I’ll be happy just to see the church saved.”

Another Fire

Nearby, residents of Old Kingston watched as the last of the flames was extinguished. Tucker, the neighbor, was the first to throw a wet blanket on the burning church. He later said, “I don’t know how much credit I’ll get for the fire, but I’ll be happy just to see the church saved.”

Who has been working for Tucker more than six years ago, one neighbor expressed his pride in the community. There is even a separate town, Old Kingston. Tucker, who never would have been a neighbor, was the first to arrive at the scene. He said, “I don’t know how much credit I’ll get for the fire, but I’ll be happy just to see the church saved.”
Geens Bend Folks Try Again

‘City of King’ in Ala.?

By Mary Ellen Gale

Tuskegee Folks Begin Model Cities Planning

BY MARY ELLEN GALE

Tuskegee, Ala.--Rev. Horace L. Davison, a minister, unveiled a proposal last week to use the city of Tuskegee as a focal point for planning a model cities program.

Davison, who is the senior pastor of the First Baptist Church in Tuskegee, suggested that Tuskegee be the site of a model cities program because the city's residents are aware of the problems that exist in the area.

In Tuskegee, residents have already begun to organize and plan for the future of their city. Davison said that Tuskegee has a tradition of community involvement and that the city's residents are committed to improving their community.

Davison's proposal is similar to other model cities programs that have been implemented in other cities across the country. These programs focus on improving the quality of life for residents by addressing issues such as housing, education, and employment.

Davison's proposal would involve the formation of a planning board, which would be responsible for developing a comprehensive plan for the city. The planning board would be made up of residents from various neighborhoods and would be charged with identifying the problems that exist in the city and developing strategies to address them.

Davison said that the planning board would work closely with residents to ensure that their voices are heard and that their needs are met. He said that the planning board would be composed of representatives from all segments of the community, including residents from low-income neighborhoods, as well as those from middle-class and affluent areas.

Davison's proposal would also involve the development of a comprehensive housing plan, which would address issues such as affordable housing, gentrification, and displacement. The housing plan would be designed to ensure that residents have access to safe and affordable housing, regardless of their income level.

Davison's proposal would also involve the development of a comprehensive education plan, which would address issues such as access to quality education, teacher training, and curriculum development. The education plan would be designed to ensure that all residents have access to high-quality education, regardless of their socioeconomic status.

Davison's proposal would also involve the development of a comprehensive employment plan, which would address issues such as job creation, workforce development, and economic development. The employment plan would be designed to ensure that residents have access to good-paying jobs, regardless of their education level.

Davison said that the city of Tuskegee has a history of community involvement and that the residents are committed to improving their community. He said that the residents are eager to work with other cities across the country to develop effective strategies for addressing the challenges that they face.

Davison's proposal is a significant step towards improving the quality of life for residents in the city of Tuskegee. It is a testament to the commitment of residents to addressing the challenges that they face and to the potential of communities to come together to build a better future.