Will Tuskegee Be Wiped Out on Dec. 8?

BY MARY ELEANOR GALE
UNION SPRINGS, Ala.--When Bullock County Schools Superintendent Lindbloom arranged a parade for the students of Union Springs schools last week, he planned at least two things: that the students would march right through downtown Union Springs, and that the parade would be all negro.

This time, he said, "most African Americans want equal opportunity."

The student newspaper--the Campus Digest--didn't bother to comment on the letter. No explanation was needed--the fact that the letter was typed in all-black letters said it all.

The story of Mrs. Dixon and her alleged prediction made it to the newspaper early last week. The story is that Mrs. Dixon, who is 76 years old, is a retired school teacher. She is a member of the college faculty and a member of the college board of trustees.

She said that she had a vision last week in which she saw a parade going through the college campus. She said that she saw a parade of negroes marching through the college and that the college would be wiped out.

She said that she had seen this vision several times before and that it always came true.

A questioner reminded Radney that "When there was a report that the University of Alabama wouldn't lift the ban on Negroes, the students had to go to the federal court and show a federal court substantial evidence of vote discrimination against Negroes," he told the crowd of his supporters.

"There has been a definite change in the Negro south," Radney said.

"They're our kids--if something comes up in the school program we don't agree with, we ought to have a voice."
