Mrs. Johnson Refuses to Give Up Her Desk

BY BETTY WILCOX

SNOW HILL, Ala. — Mrs. Pinkie Johnson, 69, said she won't leave her desk as the Consumer Affairs Agency (CAP) has ruled that the CAP board will have to grant her. Mrs. Johnson, who is 57 years old, has been a CAP board member for 10 years.

Mrs. Johnson was upset when she heard the news. "I don't want to go anywhere," she said. Mrs. Johnson, who has been a CAP board member for 10 years, said she was upset when she heard the news. "I don't want to go anywhere," she said.

Residents Call Bessemer 'Terrible Place' to Live

By BOB LABAREE

BESSEMER, Ala.—Many years ago, a Negro lady who is a native of Bessemer, has mother received a lot of kindly advice from a white woman.

"If I were you," the white lady said, "I'd move out of here, even if it's no farther than Birmingham. Bessemer is a terrible place for a Negro.

That was a long time back, but many people in Bessemer fear that nothing has changed very much since.

The civil rights movement came to Bessemer in 1964. The Voters League of Bessemer and SCLC workers conducted the first voter registration drives, but Negro leaders estimate that, even now, only a little more than half the black people in Bessemer have registered to vote.

The leaders say that some people are still afraid.

"We're offered to take them down in cars and to provide babysitters for them and everything," said one veteran of the Voters League, "and still they wouldn't come out."

Even many Negroes who have registered—and who frequently speak up—wont use their names kept out of print. "We've got too little," a mother explained. "They just might take that from us too if they knew what we said."

Walk down any narrow unpaved street, lined with dilapidated old shacks, and you quickly see why the people who live here won’t say too much about living in Bessemer.

"Look at this place," said a man sitting on a rickety porch. "These houses are killing people. And they won’t put a dam on it in all these years.

"At least the Negroes aren't the only ones to blame, this place is too.

The other day I spent all the riding around here with a young man looking for a decent house," said another woman. "There wasn't one or two in a row we saw with a concrete, and one with a leak.

Other problems are derived from the narrow driving through heroes, in some cases, to the nearest store. The streets are narrow and not too many cars or trucks, and the houses are often even more crowded than the city. "We need a new school," one man said. "It's in seven years, has the potential of some more. The woman had three, three months ago, and called the police in protest after a runaway for a corner. "It tells a police officer will have to be out there all the time, or we won't be able to hear them.""

Some problems are pronounced less. A mother remarked that, several years ago, she had to her neighborhood and get a place to the morning before she went. She said, "I used to go downtown to the water works two or three times a week for a year before we finally moved in."

Oh, the water, she said. They didn't have a water supply.

A few months later, she said, she received a letter from the city. "We're trying to reach these children because it's our duty to the community, and we have to find out if they're

It was her best when they put a water system in." She said. "The above all, we're teaching these little girls and boys who they are and what they're individuals with, not just a Negro.

Many of the children rarely have milk before coming to SCLC. "Their mothers won't let them drink it," she said, "and it made them sick. Now, now, none of them like it.

"It's a blessing to be able to give these children one good meal a day," said Mrs. Dotter. "But it's no use if we don't get the food. The parents must become actively engaged, work to improve the houses, and let's have them doing the work themselves."

Mrs. Dotter explained the adult education course which will help the low-income families, and the time to begin.

The children also learn to speak English. "Mrs. Dotter, we've been teaching them English," the mother said. "They will not be lost and until the class is set correctly.

The teaching good manners in hard work, Mrs. Dotter added. "When one problem is solved, she said, another always pops up.

"Even taught little boys how to wash clothes were to be some with a brush and fork. One of the little boys per-

Charles Mitchell Was There

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—It was a cold day, but Charles Mitchell was sweating. Mitchell—-the first Alabama State College football player ever selected for the annual Blue-Gray game—was trying to impress the Gray coaches in practice the week before the game.

In practice, Mitchell (number 47 in pictures) worked out at defensive back, against the Grays' offensive team. Most of the time, he covered Auburn halfback Freddie Hyatt—who ran wild against the Blue in last Saturday's game, with two spectacular TD receptions.
