Eutaw Demonstrators Change Their Tactics

BY James V. Wille

It was a man not to be forgotten—indomitable, transplanted (in Georgia), untiring, and above all—born of a Negro family, the Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. (in Eutaw, across the street from First Baptist Church here)

But until a week ago, the SCLC-led movement had been labelled the Negro revolution. The words of Thucydides are not unapt for them, too.

...as the SCLC had done little since 1955...Dr. King's role in this event. It is possible that I would have been called anything, but it was worse when there had been another person.

The Capital City at Night

PHOTOGRAPHY BY JAMES H. PEPLER

Take a walk in downtown Montgomery some night, ... look in all the store windows decorated for Christmas, ... have a cup of coffee at an all-night diner, ... go dancing at a night club with a swinging band, ... or just wander through the streets, ... If it's late enough, the only thing you'll hear is your footsteps.
THE REV. R. HUBBARD ADDRESSES A MASS MEETING AT THE HEIGHT OF THE BOYCOTT

By ROBERT E. SMITH

MONTGOMERY - The bus boycott, another strong weapon, was pressed into service by Negro people who played on their white neighbors' superstitions.

The great sport that year was "bus-boiling," in which Negro people tried to scare white people by telling them that the buses contained poison and that they should not ride them.

The boycott was also supported by the Montgomery Improvement Association, which consisted of 500 leaders and members of the Montgomery bus boycott committee.

The boycott ended on April 12, 1956, after the Supreme Court ruled that the segregation law was unconstitutional.

The Montgomery bus boycott was a significant event in the civil rights movement, and it helped to bring about the end of segregation in the United States.

The boycott lasted for 381 days and involved more than 500,000 people. It was led by Martin Luther King Jr., who later became a Nobel Peace Prize laureate.

The boycott was organized by the Montgomery Improvement Association (MIA), a new organization founded by a group of black leaders in the city.

The MIA made a number of demands, including the desegregation of public transportation, the implementation of a non-violent strategy, and the release of those arrested for non-violent protests.

The boycott was successful in bringing about the end of segregation in Montgomery, but it also highlighted the need for further action to achieve the full equality of the races.

Montgomery Produced Courageous New Negro

By Scott de Graaf

Montgomery—Here is a column about what happened in Montgomery in 1954, 1955, and 1956. I am the journalist who covered the Montgomery Bus Boycott in 1955. I was there, and I know the story.

What’s Happened Since 1955?

What labor movement there is in the area is still largely segregated—a fact that many blacks realize. Fortunately, we have a black paper, the Montgomery Advertiser, which has helped to bring about some changes. But the daily struggle is still a difficult one.

Some Montgomery citizens have asked me if the movement is over. I have always answered, “No, it’s just beginning.” The struggle is far from over, and there is much work to be done.

The Montgomery Bus Boycott

The Montgomery Bus Boycott was a significant event in the civil rights movement. It began on December 5, 1955, when Rosa Parks, a black woman, refused to give up her seat on a city bus to a white person. This act of defiance sparked a movement that would last for several months.

The boycott was led by the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) and the Montgomery Improvement Association, led by Martin Luther King Jr. The boycott lasted for 381 days, and it was successful in ending segregation on Montgomery’s buses.

The Montgomery Improvement Association

The Montgomery Improvement Association was founded in 1954 by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. It was a civil rights organization that worked to end segregation and discrimination in Montgomery, Alabama.

The organization was successful in bringing about changes in Montgomery, such as desegregating the city’s buses. It also played a significant role in the passing of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

The Legacy of Montgomery

Montgomery will always be remembered as a place where the civil rights movement began. It is a place where Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. made his famous “I Have a Dream” speech.

Today, Montgomery is a city that is proud of its history. It is a city that is committed to continuing the legacy of those who came before it.

The Montgomery Book Boycott

The Montgomery Book Boycott was a similar movement to the Montgomery Bus Boycott. It began in 1956 and lasted for several months.

The boycott was led by the Montgomery Improvement Association and the Congress of Racial Equality. It was successful in ending segregation in Montgomery’s bookstores.

The Montgomery Bar Boycott

The Montgomery Bar Boycott was another similar movement. It began in 1956 and lasted for several months. The boycott was successful in ending segregation in Montgomery’s bars.

A Big Job in Mobile

BY DAVID R. UNDERHILL

In the center of the Mobile County School Board meeting room, Wednesday was a regular meeting. As usual, the board discussed the state of the county's education system.

The board didn't take any action, except to ask Clifford D. Stones, superintendent of education, to sit down. The board's agenda included a report on the school's progress.

Just because you're in a meeting doesn't mean you should just sit there. You need to actively participate in the discussion.

Camp Hill Case Settled

BY MARY L. BACCHETTA

DAVEVILLE.--A white police chief and a Negro woman both differenced their claims to several thousand dollars. In the case of Mrs. Godfrey versus Mrs. Goudy, of Camp Hill, last Saturday, the police chief called the police station, and tagged as a lost article.

"It was trouvé and stamped on. I said, "Look, I know the peace officer you want to see me right now."

Mrs. Goudy, a resident of the police chief's residence.

"If you know someone a bigger woman, why don't you act like one?"

"I asked why I got to treat you right because you're right."

"I'm not going to treat you right because you're right."

"I'm not going to treat you right because you're right."

"I'm not going to treat you right because you're right."
