How Two Girls Saw School Integration

By STEPHEN COTTON

TUSCALOOSA--Two Negro girls at one time or another have attended the schools of both the white and Negro children in Tuscaloosa County, Alabama. There are many in Tuscaloosa County who have had this experience.

In the case of the two girls referred to in this article, the experience was not unusual, but it was a wonder they gave them to Us this late.

One of the girls, Mildred Johnson, learned how to read and write while attending school in Tuscaloosa. She said, "yeah.

The other girl, Percy Johnson, learned how to read and write while attending school in Tuscaloosa. She said, "yeah.

Both girls were attending Tuscaloosa High School last year. She said, "yeah.

It wasn't until six years after the first Negro student attended in any all-white school in Tuscaloosa City that two Negroes attended.

This year the first school Negro students attended had to be integrated because the school board had to be forced to do it. In the fall of last year, Tuscaloosa High School was forced to be integrated by court order.

Man Convicted of Assault, Battery After Being Shot by State Trooper

By NAYE BOHRI

A Virginia State Trooper W. E. Stewart stood inside the courtroom with a cigarette in his mouth, looking as if he didn't want to be there. But he was there, and he was there for a reason.

The trooper was accused of killing a man in the Dallas County courthouse. The man was shot and killed in what看起来像是自卫行为.

If he was guilty, the trooper would be facing a possible life sentence. If he was not guilty, he would be free to go back to his job as a state trooper.

The trial was hotly contested, with both sides presenting their arguments and evidence. The accused trooper's lawyer argued that he acted in self-defense, while the prosecution argued that the trooper had acted recklessly.

The jury took several hours to deliberate and then returned with a verdict of guilty. The trooper was then taken into custody and will remain in jail until his sentence is determined.

The case has sparked a debate about the role of law enforcement officers in the courts. Some argue that officers should be able to carry guns in the courtroom to protect themselves, while others argue that it is too dangerous for officers to be armed in such a setting.

The judge in the case ruled that the state trooper would be held without bail until his sentencing hearing, which is scheduled for a later date.

Black Power, Strike City

BY PATRICK JAMES

SOUTHERN CITY, Miss.—More than 100 people, including students, workers, and professionals, marched in protest against police brutality.

The protest was in response to a police shooting that occurred earlier in the week.

The protesters were chanting and holding signs that read, "Black Lives Matter," and "End Police Violence.

They marched through the downtown area, blocking traffic and drawing attention to their cause.

The protest was peaceful, and the police did not use any force to disperse the crowd.

Later, during a rally held in the park, leaders spoke about the importance of unity and continued to call for justice.

The protest was one of many that have taken place across the country in recent months, as people continue to demand accountability for police brutality.

Legislature

Governor's Statement: "Black Power, Strike City"

Governor Smith made a statement in response to the protest, saying, "We must stand with the Black community and support their demands.

We cannot allow police violence to continue.

We will work closely with law enforcement to ensure that our officers are properly trained and equipped to handle such situations.

We also call on Congress to pass legislation that will protect the rights of all Americans, regardless of race.

Two Stories About Deal Helicon School Dispute

BY NORMAN WALTERS

Helen, Miss.—Two stories about the Helicon School Dispute are of national interest.

The first story is about the Black students who have been protesting for months against the school's inaction on their demands.

The second story is about the state's response to the protests, which has been mixed.

Some consider the state's response to be fair, while others believe it is not doing enough to address the situation.

We will continue to follow this story and provide updates as they become available.

WOMEN PONDER DECISION AT CO-OP MEETING

BY WAYNE BURDER

CA MDen—"The children played to yonder between passing cars," said Mrs. Bessie Munden, "they had no place to swim except for a mudhole. It had the kids around it so mosquitoes brought around it. That was real bad, for kids to play in that."

And so in 1955, Mrs. Munden began working to get a playground installed in Wilcox County. The result of her efforts was the Freedom Quilting Bee, just outside Camden, Ala. This little nest is a part of the greater community, but it has become a focal point for the people of the area, especially the children.

"It was 11 years ago," Mrs. Munden continued, "we had a lot of kids around then, so we thought it'd be a good idea to get one. We worked very hard on it, and finally it was finished."

That first year, they raised $2,000 from the Wilcox County community. That money was used to purchase the land and build the playground. In 1957, the playground was opened to the public. Now, every year, the community raises money to keep the playground open and running smoothly.

"It's a great place for the kids to come and play," Mrs. Munden said. "They can swim, play sports, and just have a good time."

The playground is open to the public, and kids of all ages are welcome. The community is always looking for new ways to raise money and keep the playground running. It's a real community resource that everyone can enjoy.

"It's something we all take pride in," Mrs. Munden said. "It's a place where the kids can come and have fun, and we want to keep it that way."
MOST OF THEM WERE PRETTY NICE KIDS

The boys who liked to be friends with me were mostly the troublemakers. They were easy to hurt, and on me, they were always quiet and let me raise my hand. If the teacher called me talk, they would never come out and hit you—exc
