Death on the Highways

BY JUDITH CONNOR

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Former Governor William C. Wallace of Alabama conceded last Wednesday in a terse letter that his campaign for the U.S. Senate was finished. "I feel that my hands should be cut off, because I am not making the slightest effort to assist the electors," he wrote.

The move came suddenly Friday when Wallace appeared before the Alabama Democratic state convention and favored the candidacy of Senator George C. Wallace. The state delegates formally nominated the governor at a meeting delayed from last week because of rain. Wallace had been fighting for the Democratic nomination against Senator John J. Hatcher, who had the support of the state party organization.

In his letter, Wallace said: "I do not believe that the people are ready to back a candidate who is not going to be active. I have not gone back to the house in the past ten days, nor have I seen the state conventions. I have not heard of any plans for the coming election. I am not going to be an active candidate for the Senate."

The letter was written in part because of the recent victory of Governor George C. Wallace in the Alabama gubernatorial election. Wallace said he would support the governor in the Senate race.

Wallace's decision to drop out of the Senate race came as a surprise to many political observers. He had been considered a strong candidate, and his withdrawal could affect the outcome of the race.

Wallace's letter was faxed to Senator Hatcher, who has been leading in the polls. The Senator said he was pleased with Wallace's decision.
A lot of us peoples are wonderin' where our refuge roam over the country. In this terrible fire, the merchants, farmers, and others who have been affected by this disaster, are asking for help. I don't know what they got—Alabama's first Negro sheriff since Reconstruction.

Her love's segregationists apparently haven't quite grasped the fact that they just lost the election. Alabama can't live without Negroes any more than white constitutents, and white capitlalists who button up like snowdrops in the snow, they are over there fighting. In the primary, the run-off, and the general election.

Many women, especially those who have been denied their civil rights, are still living in the same old place as when we first be­gan to this business.

Letters to the Editor

The war in Viet Nam is ugly, war, and has been for years. But the war in Viet Nam is not the only war that has been going on.

The United States should be in Viet Nam to help them with their war, not to help them fight for their land.

We have been forced to fight for our freedom in Viet Nam, and we have been fighting for our freedom in the United States. We have been fighting for our freedom in the United States for many years more than the war in Viet Nam.

I am a woman who is trying to preserve “Americanism.” I believe in the freedom of the American people, and I believe in the freedom of the Negro people. I believe that the war in Viet Nam is not the only war that has been going on.

The budget for the East Mississippi State College, according to the legislature, was increased. (For Instance, a farmer who employed at least two people for one year and over $20 a month must be covered by the minimum wage law.

The minimum wage for all these new workers will be $1.60 an hour.

Workers covered under the new law, however, may have to pay $0.25 more than their regular hourly wage. The law is in effect on March 1.

The Negroes just couldn't believe it. Right after their return from the civil rights movement, they were confronted with a new and different—though equally difficult—challenge: how to work for the reconstruction of a new system of social justice. The automobile had revolutionized their way of life ever since the war, and the Negroes were just beginning to see how it could change the course of American society. The students, laymen and clergymen who attended the Institute aimed to let their students from old ways be replaced by new ones. The new church had to be one which could change the course of the whole structure of American life, for the Institute's teachings would be put to use.

Macon Parents Protest Schools

By Mary Ellis Saul

There’s nothing new about parents wanting better schools for their children. But the reactions of some parents to a recent meeting at Leal Lumpkin’s home were so extreme that he signed a letter to the Macon County Board of Education.

The latter asked the parents for smaller classes, more courses, and physical improvements at Prarie and Shorter elementary and central. Leal Lumpkin was one of the parents who gave the school board their reactions. What he wanted for all the parents, he said, was "a program that would do it all." But some of the parents present wanted more than that. "We want the school system educated," said one parent. "We want them to be taught to think." But Lumpkin wanted more than that. "We want them to be taught to think," he said, "but we want them to be taught to think and to act." The letter was signed by the parents, not just Lumpkin, but by all the parents who were present.

In the letter, Lumpkin wrote, "We want the school system educated, but we want them to be taught to think." He went on to say, "But we want them to be taught to think and to act." He ended the letter with, "We want the school system educated, but we want them to be taught to think and to act."
