In Neshoba Death Case

No More Delay

By Gail Fulk
MERIDIAN, Miss.--The most publicized of the 180 rights case of all will finally come to trial May 29.

District Judge J. Hume Bridges, who set the trial date,150 days after the last hearing, said the case would begin Monday, May 29.

The trial of the James W. Butler Case, involving the deaths of three Civil Rights workers in Neshoba County, Miss., will effectively put to rest the charges of the white elderly and Negro civil rights demonstrators that the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Mississippi Highway Patrol conspired to kill the three men.

The three men were murdered in Neshoba County, Miss., on June 21, 1964, in the wake of the march at Philadelphia, Miss., against voter registration discrimination.

Housing Program Killed

By Mobile Commission

NOTASULGA--Harold A. Manley, the Director of the Mobile Housing Group of Mississippi (CMHG), said last weekend that the city of Notasulga is not ready to adopt a public housing program.

The group had been considering the city for several years and had made plans to construct a public housing development in the city, but the city commission decided to no longer consider the project.

The city commission's vote Tuesday did not come as a surprise to the group, which said it had been working on the project for several months.

The city commission's vote was the result of a change in the city's attitude towards public housing. The city had previously been interested in the project, but had later decided it was not ready to proceed.

The city commission's decision was based on the fact that the city had not been able to raise the necessary funds to construct the public housing development.

The group had planned to construct a public housing development in the city, but the city commission's decision to no longer consider the project means that the group will have to look for another location for its public housing development.

The group is still interested in building a public housing development in Notasulga, but it will have to find another location.

SUMTER FARMERS LOSE THEIR HOMES:
"DON'T KNOW WHERE WE'RE GOING"

"No one don’t us out now.
Done wore ourselves out."

"Can't stay in the road there."

The sun best down on 12 farmers, standing in the dust with their hands behind their heads. Behind them stretched the gently rolling fields of Sumter County.

The men, and the all-drown colors whenever there is in a county more or less a day's work, have been farming near Panola all their lives. Many of them can trace their families back to "slavery times."

They have planted tobacco all their lives. They till the land that their sons may seed the crops, as new generation in Panola will tress from hand to hand. The farmers are among 30 families who live on a large plantation here. Last November the plantation owner, Barnes A. Rogers, sent his form letter telling them to "get acre elsewhere."

TCA Discusses Notasulga Class

by Mary Ellen Gage

The Alabama Council on Human Relations has set a special meeting at Notasulga High School to discuss a multi-racial children's program. The council was formed in response to complaints that the schools in Notasulga were segregated.

Kingston, the only black student in the program, said she was happy to be there. "I like the new program because it gives me a chance to learn and work with other kids," she said.

The meeting was called by the Alabama Council on Human Relations to discuss the program and to listen to the concerns of the community.

KEVIN--"I'm glad that black students are being included in the school system," said Kevin, a white student. "It's important for everyone to have an equal opportunity to learn and grow together.

"I think that the program is a good step in the right direction," he continued. "I hope that it can continue to grow and help more students in the future.

"I'm looking forward to seeing how it develops," he added.

Blessings Blessings

The next time you hear the words "blessing" or "blessed," think of these questions. Is this blessing true? Why? Do I have the right to give this blessing?

The answers to these questions may help you understand the true meaning of blessing.

In my absence: what should I do? Can I say no? What can I do instead?

What can I get from this blessing? What can I give to this person?

"Do you know what your children don't have?" asked Mrs. Pitts. "They don't have enough to eat."

"And that's why we need a program like this," said Mr. Manley. "It gives children the chance to learn and grow.

"I am proud of the children at Notasulga," he said. "They are working hard and doing well.

"And I am proud of the people in the community," he added. "They are working hard to make this program a success.

Geese Election Case Gets More Complicated

In Montgomery, Ala.

The Alabama Council on Human Relations has decided to open its offices in Montgomery, hoping to be of service to the people of the city.

The council, which was formed to investigate the election of Mr. Lee, has decided to open an office in the city to help people who have questions or concerns about the election.

It also plans to hold meetings and other events to inform the public about the election and its implications.

The council hopes to be able to help people understand the election and its implications, and to provide them with the information they need to make informed decisions.

The council also plans to work with local organizations to help them understand the election and its implications.
